

NOT READY TO MEET EASTERN POLO PLAYERS

Information That Cooperstown Team Plans to Invade Hawaii This Year Causes Consternation

Hawaii is faced with a polo invasion this winter. Mainland papers have from time to time carried stories to the effect that one or more crack eastern polo teams were coming to the coast for the winter season, and that a journey to Hawaii was on the schedule, but the first authentic information to this effect comes in a letter from Major Collin G. Ross to Walter F. Dillingham, which was received a few days ago.

Major Ross, who is secretary of the Coronado Country Club, and a well known polo expert, writes that he has recently returned from eastern polo centers, and that he was informed that the crack Cooperstown polo team, winner of many big events, was to come to Hawaii in November, play here for a month or six weeks, and then return to California for the winter tournament circuit.

The Cooperstown team is composed of Von Stange, Ramsey, Beadleson and Stevenson, and is rated almost as high as the famous Meadowbrook four that defended the international cup.

Locals Not Ready.

This news has thrown consternation into the local polo camp. At any other time these visitors would have been as welcome as the flowers in May, and would have been given a welcome and reception of the true Hawaiian brand, but it would be next to impossible to get together the polo men two months from now.

The polo season is closed, or practically so; the Oahu club's stables at Moanalua will be shut down after the present series with the cavalry, and the string will be turned out with the exception of a few green horses which will be worked throughout the winter in preparation for next year. Walter Dillingham, prime mover in polo, and captain of the All-Hawaii team, expects to leave for the mainland in a short time, to be gone several weeks. Altogether, November is about the worst time imaginable for polo in Hawaii.

Plans Made on Coast.

"It looks from this letter of Major Ross as though Malcolm Stevenson and Perry Beadleson were really going to carry out the enthusiastic plans they talked over when we were all on the coast last spring," said Walter Dillingham this morning. "At that time they asked if we could change our playing season to give them a chance at us on our home grounds, and we said certainly, that we would do anything to get them here. It was understood, though, that we would have plenty of notice, for polo isn't a game that can be gone into on a moment's notice, and the pony question has to be considered months in advance. In fact, the tentative plan was for the eastern team to come here in 1914, so that the All-Hawaii team could return with them to California for the 1915 season. Besides, our ponies have been in training for more than a year, and have had quite enough polo. Three of the best of them, Garry the New, Helen G. and Dandy, that the Hawaii players lent for the international matches, haven't been sent back to us yet, and this also is an important consideration, for to meet an invasion of this kind, we would have to call on every available high-class pony."

"Another thing that makes the proposed visit inopportune," said Dillingham, "is the ground question. It would be very much better all round to play these games at Kapoli Park than at Moanalua. Such a series of games would create a lot of interest in Honolulu, and there are thousands of polo enthusiasts who would go to see the matches if they could reach the field by trolley. Moanalua is a beautiful location, and has been a boon to the polo men, but the field has limitations from a playing standpoint. All we need to make a first-class field at Kapoli is water. Give us an adequate supply, and in six months we can have a top notch playing surface."

It would be a great thing for polo here to have a field as accessible as Kapoli. More than three thousand dollars have been spent on filling in

ENGLAND HAS NEW HEAVYWEIGHT CHAMPION

Since the defeat of Bombardier Wells, the heavyweight champion of Great Britain, by Gusnot Smith in New York, the Britishers have been casting about for another "white hope," one who will be able to "stand the gaff" and weather the storm when it comes to body punishment, and from information at hand they have unearthed another "hope" in the person of Dick Smith, the amateur champion of England.

Dick has decided to throw in his lot with the professionals. Born 27 years ago, Smith possesses all the necessary qualifications for a "white hope," and may go further than some of the bladed hopes. He stands 6 feet 11 1/2 inches, weighs about 190 pounds and has a very satisfactory record. Of his 49 contests he has won 45, lost three and drawn one.

Formerly a soldier, he followed Bombardier Wells as champion of India. As an amateur boxer he has done remarkably well, having won the championship of Great Britain in 1911-12-13, while a member of the London police force.

He probably will not take on Bombardier Wells and Georges Carpentier for his initial efforts as a professional, but one of the lesser lights. Professional and amateur boxing are vastly different things on the other side of the Atlantic, as many amateurs have found on taking the plunge into the professional waters.

The referees view things from an entirely different standpoint, and a 20-round contest with 3-minute rounds under professional rules takes a bit of negotiating. Under amateur laws boxing contests are not allowed of longer duration than six rounds of two minutes each, but for the championships and most interclub competitions the bouts are limited to three rounds.

Amateur referees are very strict in upholding the rules of the game, and some of their antics would not be tolerated by professionals for one minute. Clinching is barred and a boxer is liable to be disqualified for a foul on offense after having been once cautioned.

Then again, amateurs are forbidden to receive any advice during the progress of a bout, and any instructions that the second may have for his boy has to wait until the round ends. Under amateur rules boxing is kept very clean, which is more than can be said for the professionals.

Therefore the entry of Dick Smith (nameake of Gusnot) will be watched with interest even by followers on this side of the big pond.

MAISEL, COOK AND WILLIAMS MAY FORM NUCLEUS OF FAST TEAM FOR FRANK CHANCE

COOK
WILLIAMS

NEW YORK.—Frank Chance's recent purchases in his further attempts to build up his dilapidated and down-trodden Yankees aroused the hope of loyal fans here that the team might be on a better basis next season, instead of tail enders, as they are at present. It was predicted that the Highlanders would make a stronger showing on their present last swing around the western circuit. The purchase of Fritz Maisei for $12,000 and two players from the Baltimore team of the International League, and the acquisition of Williams and Cook materially strengthen the cellar dwellers. The sale of Maisei was the talk of the baseball world. Picked up in the sand lots of Baltimore in 1910, he became one of the best infielders in the minor league. His rise to major league caliber was meteoric. This little player is very fast on the bases, and his fielding is sensational. Both Cook and Williams are fast men, and handy with the bat. They are making good for Chance.

GREENFIELD AND CASTLE PAIRED

On account of the rain, only one match was played off in the doubles tennis championship tournament, yesterday. On the Pacific courts, Castle and his new partner, F. E. Greenfield, of Ewa, defeated Guard and Littlejohn in an interesting four-set match, 6-4, 1-6, 6-4, 6-3.

This match caused all sorts of complications before it was finally settled. Originally Castle was to have paired with Lowrey, but the latter was injured Sunday, and unable to play. Then Castle phoned to Ewa to see if he could get a substitute partner, and Elklund came up. He and Castle beat Guard and Littlejohn, but Elklund had already figured in the tournament and been defeated, and it was manifestly absurd for him to play a second time. The committee threw out the match, but with the consent of the opposition, allowed Castle to pair with Greenfield, and the match was re-played with the result above noted. Of course the whole proceeding was highly irregular, and Guard and Littlejohn would have been well within their rights to claim the match by default, when the team drawn against them was unable to take the courts.

California hospitals claim that it is a practical impossibility to live up to the eight-hour labor law for women, inasmuch as not only the nurses but the patients are subjected to hardships on account of it.

READY FOR GOLF EVENT

Country Club golfers are working hard in preparation for the tournament next Saturday that will mark the opening of the new 18 hole course. The understanding is that no one is to play the course until tournament day, so that everyone gets an even break at the new holes.

It is believed that a record golfing crowd will turn out to take part in the tournament, which will be medical play handicap, and several sets of drawings will be made, to accommodate players who arrive at different times, and to avoid congestion of the links. The first pairings will be made at noon, and at half hour intervals until 3 o'clock drawings will be made. No entrance fee will be charged, and the tournament is open to all club members.

The club has put up a handsome suit case and a kit bag for the best and second net scores, and Wall and Loughery have put up a cup for the best gross score.

A rear-end collision between two St. Louis and San Francisco passenger trains at Newburg, Mo., resulted in the injury of twenty-eight persons. None of the injuries was serious.

Assistant Superintendent Oneal of the United States mint at San Francisco, was overcome by the heat while traveling across the desert and is in a serious condition at Ogden, Utah.
